Portfolio Style

Investment Rationale

The fund aims to invest in stocks of listed companies which benefit from the increasing digitalisation of the financial sector. The strategy provides a balanced access to an attractive and long-term investment theme. The fund is focused on structural growth trends. The Robeco New World Financial Equity fund has been investing in digital finance since 2011 so investors will also benefit from the experience of the investment team.

Investment Philosophy

Fund Management Team

The fund is co-managed by Patrick Lemmens and Jeroen van Oerle, PMs from the Trends Investing Team, located in Rotterdam, which oversees more than USD 3 bn. They benefit from the support of 2 dedicated trend researchers and they leverage research capabilities within the group for financials and technology stocks. Long tenure, stable and strong culture of collaboration within the investment team.

Strengths

- Complementary backgrounds and expertise: M. Lemmens has more than 25 years of experience in financials with good understanding of regulatory issues, whilst M. van Oerle is more focused on new technologies. We think this duo exhibits the appropriate skillset to manage such a strategy.
- Unique proposition: the product is among the very few actively managed funds available for this thematic. The fund is a solid option to access the Fintech segment compared to ETFs which are US-centric and focused on software developers or payments. Robeco's fund has a much broader scope than a few trends.
- Performance: since inception, performance has been robust on absolute and relative basis. The fund outperformed its reference index in both up and down markets. The carve out of digital finance within the Robeco's Financials fund has been also very solid since 2011.

Weaknesses

- Scenario dependency: the fund is highly reliant on the IT sector (on average 60%), even though tech exposure is different than typically found in traditional IT funds.
- Track record: despite being investing in the FinTech space for more than 7 years through the Robeco New World Financials product, the fund's track record is short in a standalone basis.
